Ending Relationship Abuse

About Haven Horizons

Haven Horizons is a national prevention organisation dedicated to the elimination of Domestic, Sexual, and Gender-based Violence (DSGBV).

We deliver creative, innovative prevention initiatives. We provide public education and accredited training for frontline professionals. We host a virtual DSGBV community of practice and global classroom. We also collaborate on research.

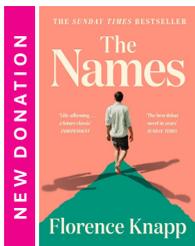

Our work focuses on challenging and changing the attitudes, beliefs, policies, practices and systems that support and drive DSGBV.

Our vision is a future free from domestic, sexual and gender-based violence.

Book Donation Initiative

We donate books on Domestic, Sexual and Gender-based Violence to academic and public libraries in Ireland and Northern Ireland (Technological University of the Shannon, Libraries Ireland, Libraries Northern Ireland and Women’s Aid Federation Northern Ireland).

The collection currently has 80 titles, including powerful memoirs, books aimed at young adults and children, intersectional literature and specialist books for practitioners, academics and survivors.

The Names

By Florence Knapp (2025)

The Names spotlights the intergenerational impact of domestic violence. This powerful novel explores how a single decision, the naming of a child, can create three alternative realities for a family due to the father's response to the decision.

Course Overview

Domestic abuse and coercive control are pervasive societal problems affecting people from all cultural, educational, religious, gender and socioeconomic backgrounds. The course will provide students with information to enable them to reflect on and respond to domestic abuse and coercive control.

The course will provide students with:

- An understanding of theories, concepts, myths and dynamics in relation to domestic abuse and coercive control.
- The knowledge and skills to respond appropriately to victims, and to identify effective multi-disciplinary collaboration and the importance of self-care.
- The course will use real life case studies to examine the barriers to help-seeking and disclosure, victim engagement, victim safety, risk assessment and perpetrator accountability.
- Opportunities to reflect on their understanding of national and international intervention and prevention strategies as the course progresses.

Who is the course suitable for?

The course will be of interest to personnel in frontline services whose work or volunteering brings them into contact with victims or perpetrators of domestic abuse and coercive control.

Please note that this course is not suitable for people currently: experiencing domestic abuse, attending support services or who are involved in court proceedings regarding domestic, sexual, gender-based abuse

This programme was developed in collaboration with Haven Horizons (www.havenhorizons.com).
